THE RATTLESNAKE INDUSTRY

At the Height of Its Prosperity in North Carolina It Struck a Snag.

In Swain county, North Carolina, an enterprising woodsman succeeded in building up a profitable business in shipping rattlesnakes to the East. That section of North Carolina, it appears, produces a superior breed of rattlesnake and New York scientists and naturalists have been paying willingly $5 apiece for good specimens of rattler.

Manuel Weeks, the wide-awake individual who has been supplying the scientific world with live and husky snakes, owns a large body of land in the North Carolina mountains. The most of the land is too poor and rugged to raise a fuss on, but it abounds in rattlesnakes. A New York professor on a vacation, was looking around for specimens of flora and fauna and other things of interest to nature lovers, saw some of the snakes and wanted a few for his collection. Weeks agreed to catch them and ship them and did so. Subsequently the fame of the North Carolina snakes spread over New York and other naturalists wanted specimens. Weeks was furnishing them right along, boxing them up and sending them by express from Bryson City.

The business was going merrily and remuneratively until one day a careless messenger dropped a box of snakes and smashed it on the floor of the express car. The express messengers left the car in haste and the whole train crew was summoned for a general snake killing. It was an exciting time and it delayed traffic and threw a number of passengers into a condition approaching nervous prostration. Weeks not only failed to realize on that particular consignment, but the express company sent a hurry up order to the agent at Bryson City to accept no more snakes for shipment. The next time that Weeks appeared with a box of snakes the agent gave him the icy stare and suggested that rattlers were very much persona non grata and there didn't seem to be any indication of the company warming up to Week's peculiar industry.

Weeks has sued the company for $5,000 damages, probably on the ground that it is acting in restraint of trade. In North Carolina snakes are a drug on the market. It looks bad for the snake farm unless ways and means for shipment of its products may be found. Nevertheless the express company and its employees, the trainmen and the traveling public must be conceded to have some rights in the matter.—From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Miss Emory Todhunter went to Kansas City Wednesday to spend the day.

Richard Field went to Carrollton Tuesday evening on business.
